A Glimpse of Buddhist Feminism

Buddhism, like most religions of the world, has been dominated by men. But in the background, and sometimes secretly, powerful and awakened women have practiced the Path through their bodies and unique perspectives. We can use this tradition as a case study in how the contributions and needs of women can manifest even through institutions long dominated by men, where women shine forth a lesser heard voice of the sacred to help us chart a path forward to balance and to transcend false binaries. –Rev. Fa Jun, Minister

We will gather virtually via Zoom for remote participation. Congregants will not be present at the Fellowship due to physical distancing to mediate the spread of COVID-19.

Children & Youth Religious Exploration (CYRE) classes will resume once we start holding services at the Fellowship again. In the meantime, continue to look for emails and Facebook posts from a UU perspective relevant to children and their caregivers sheltering in place. Below, read about Community the Goodwill Bear's rock painting for all ages.

Community Paves the Way to Reunite—One Day

While we wait to reunite at UUFLG, Community the Goodwill Bear invites all ages to pave the way by painting a stone to express their feelings about being there together. Painting rocks to lay along paths has become a way to share uplifting messages and images during COVID-19 restrictions. We will have an opportunity to lay all our stones down together at the Fellowship when we do return. In the meantime, keep yours at home as a promise to yourself and your family that we will reunite one day. Some designs to consider: a chalice, "UU," a key word or phrase from one of the seven principles or a hymn, your initials or face, an abstract design or symbol, a tree or favorite animal or flower. Watch for Community's inspiration this week as they go arty!

Pandemic Poetry Share

As we continue to cope with COVID-19 and the physical separation it has imposed, we find solace and inspiration in our creativity and that of others. This Sunday, please bring a poem or equivalent (your own or someone else's) that responds to the current situation or supports you and/or others within it. These may be profound meditations, but they may also be lighthearted diversions – whatever you are inspired to offer is welcome.

Please do remember that this is an all-ages service, so language and themes need to be appropriate for all. If possible, please let Lynn Golbetz or Alison Hurwitz know in advance that you would like to participate, as this is the first time we have done a sharing service remotely. We are also happy to look at your poem in advance if you are in any doubt about its suitability. However, last-minute offerings will also be welcome. Contacts: lynngolbetz@comcast.net, alison.hurwitz@gmail.com

New to Zoom? Our Zoom basics webpage has links to quick videos on how to use Zoom, including signup, application download, joining a meeting, using chat, and video and sound setup and control during a meeting.

In addition to speaking and using Zoom chat to share joys and concerns during online services, congregants may choose to send an email to joysandconcerns@uuflg.org. Simply send a brief message at least an hour ahead of time. Chat and audio are available for real-time sharing.

Send announcements to comms@uuflg.org by Tuesday of that week's issue.

Announcements are edited for brevity, clarity, and style.
